FORMER CITY OFFICIALS CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT

St. Joseph, Mo., Feb. 20.—Charles H. Wyatt, former city treasurer, and Homer Osborn, former city auditor, are charged with embezzlement in warrants upon information filed by prosecuting attorney Farrar.

Wyatt resigned a week ago after admitting he was short in his accounts, and Osborn was dismissed by city controller Shaffer.

Examination of the books controlled by the controller places the amount of the alleged deficit at $27,000.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Thickness and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with rum and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to use "Pape's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of trouble.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with "Pape's Sage and Sulphur," no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. Just dampen your hair with water or brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After a second application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.—Advertisement.

No difference how badly your stomach is disordered, you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapiesin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapiesin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eruptions of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

FEDERAL INQUIRY PROBES TRUSTS

Benefits or Injuries of Monopolies Will Be Determined, Davies Asserts.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 20.—A federal investigation now under way will answer the question of whether or not monopolies are beneficial, and whether or not the monopolistic system contains within itself the seeds of decay.

This is a leading statement of Joseph E. Davies, commissioner of the federal bureau of corporations, in his annual report.

In a review of a working program for the bureau commissioner Davies points out that aside from an economic study of the trust question, retail price maintenance is one of the questions to be taken up. Trusts, their efficiency and reforms, however, are to comprise the principal work for the coming year. The need of some federal body for the purpose of investigation and publicity in trust affairs, whether it be the bureau of corporations as now organized, or a commission as proposed in the pending administration bill in congress, commissioner Davies emphasized.

In his report he discussed the monopoly question at length, saying in part:

Is Trust Form Efficient?
"The question is whether the trust form of organization is really efficient. If it be found that smaller competitive units in industry can produce commodities more cheaply, or even as cheaply as monopolistic units, and that they have other and greater advantages than those claimed for the monopolistic or trust system, then the problem is finally settled in favor of the competitive system, and the chief argument for the regulation of monopoly is destroyed.

Prices Higher or Lower?
"It is contended by some that with the increase in the size of industrial enterprises there goes a reduction in the cost of extraction, manufacture and distribution, and that such reduction in cost is accompanied by a lower price to the consumer and does not involve a reduction in wages or an impairment of the conditions of labor.

"Even if these claims were true the question would still remain, of course, whether the evil resulting from large combinations would not be greater than the alleged advantages of cheaper production and distribution. It is contended, on the other hand, that the source and origin of monopoly is found chiefly in the desire to exploit the general public by stock jobbing, for the immediate profit of the promoters, or for the purpose of obtaining control of the market and exacting unduly high prices from the consumer.

"Many large combinations have failed and demonstrated their economic inefficiency. Combinations have obtained control of the market and, it is admitted, have prospered. But this is alleged to be due to their monopolistic position, and not to superior efficiency. According to those who hold this view, there is a point beyond which the increase in the size of enterprises does not result in an increase in economy and efficiency, but rather in loss and waste.

Price Policy Important.
"Of almost equal importance with the determination of this question of competitive efficiency is that of the competitive policy of such large industrial combinations as have achieved a substantial control of the market. Those who allege that such industrial combinations result in greater economy and efficiency in production often overlook the equally important question of whether or not they absorb all the benefits of such economies in increased profits without conceding any share thereof to labor in higher wages, or to consumers in relatively lower prices or improved quality of goods, etc. The determination of the facts in respect to this question also might be such as to establish broad generalizations or conclusions, but the importance of having the facts is none the less obvious.

HEAD OF WORLD'S Y. M. C. A.

IS DINED IN EL PASO
Dallas, Tex., Feb. 20.—John W. Everman, general superintendent of the Texas and Pacific railway, paid a most fitting tribute yesterday to Dr. John P. Nunn, of New York, head of the world's Y. M. C. A. and a director of the T. & P. railway. With about three score of other officials and a distinguished body of representative business men, Mr. Everman, acting as hostmaster, entertained the visitor and others who were with him at the Adolphus hotel.

Dr. Nunn used to visit Texas in the frontier days, with his friends, the late Jay Gould, as the latter's physician and companion.

U. S. CRUISER SETS NEW RECORD FOR TORPEDOES

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 20.—A new world's record for torpedo firing in battle practice was made here by the United States cruiser California. It scored five and one-half hits out of seven shots.

The firing took place at a range of six hundred yards while the cruiser was steaming in knots an hour. The first five shots were perfect bull's eyes.

Saving Money Adventures of a Grouch

"I STEPPED in to see Mrs. Higginbottom this afternoon," remarked Mrs. Jamesworthy, "and I was surprised to learn that she bakes all the bread for her family. She hasn't bought a loaf at the bakery for years, and the saving is astonishing. I never realized how much money a woman can save by doing her own baking. So I have made up my mind to quit patronizing the baker."

"Well, you may calm your mind down again," said Jamesworthy, "for I won't stand for any more of your back action economy. It is true that the right kind of woman can save all sorts of money by doing her baking at home. My sainted mother was a humdinger at making bread, and she exhibited at the county fair every year, and always gathered in the blue ribbon and the wooden medal. That was in the halcyon days when people thought very little of making bread, except tobacco, on the farm. Father had his wheat field, and mowed the golden grain with a scythe, and then threshed it with a flail, and then took it to the gristmill and had it ground into real flour, the kind of flour that makes whiskers grow on a man's insides."

"Mother made her world beating bread with the simplest kind of implements. She had a board to knead the dough on, and a rolling pin that father whittled out of a chunk of cordwood, and I don't remember anything else. And she baked her bread in an old mangle loading stove that was brought to this country by the Pilgrim Fathers. And, as I remarked in a previous chapter, her bread took the blue ribbon and honorable mention at the county fair every year, and the local paper always had a long editorial about it."

"If I thought for a minute, Mrs. Jamesworthy, that you would emulate that grand woman I'd send for a barrel of flour and a gallon of yeast and tell you to go ahead and bake till the cows come home. But I haven't lived with you these many years without getting wise to your curves, and the most expensive thing I ever ran up against is your economy. Before you could bake a loaf you'd discover that a new stove is necessary, for the old one doesn't track right and acts as though it has the measles. You'd keep on my trail until I blew in $100 or so on a patent revolving stove with all the latest do-funnies. Then you'd want a large silver mounted cabinet to keep the bread in when it was baked, and about ten thousand implements and utensils of one sort or another, and by the time you had your first batch of bread ready for consumption the overseer of the poor would be backing his wagon up to our front porch, and inviting us all to take a joy ride to the county farm."

"As I look back across the voiceless years I remember the time when you proved to me by statistics that a cow would be a great saver to us. I was young then and thought you might possibly be right once in a cow's age, so I sold my only government bond and bought a cow with the proceeds. I naturally supposed that among corn cures wouldn't be for more than a milk bucket and churn as accessories, and I was thinking of an old fashion dash churn, such as my mother used to handle. But before we had a full equipment I had to seek my watch and borrow money from my friends. I discovered that an ordinary bottled cow calls for more furniture than a modern apartment building. All the delivery wagons in town were chasing out to our place leaving tinware and woodware, and patented doodads, and there were workmen here day after day building a sanitary stable with cement floors and ventilators in the roof. And I had to buy a sanitary suit before you'd let me milk and I got so sick of sanitary buckets and milkstools and such traps that it soured my sunny nature. It took me three years to get out of the hole after that experiment, and now you want to save money by baking bread. I draw the line here and now, Mrs. Jamesworthy."

CHILD PLAINTIFF IN $5000 DAMAGE SUIT

Jeanette G. McKinney, aged five years, living with her parents at 431 South Stanton street, has filed suit against the El Paso Gas company and the city of El Paso for $5000 damages. The little plaintiff filed her suit through her mother, Grace McKinney, in the 1st district court.

On December 25, 1913, the little girl says that she was walking with her mother who was rolling her little baby brother. Between First and Second streets on the east side of South Stanton street, the little plaintiff was there was a water meter projecting about three-fourths of an inch above the sidewalk. Seven feet beyond the water meter, she declares, there was a gas meter and that was one and one-half inches above the walk. She struck the water meter with her finger, and her mother and upper lip loosened some of her teeth and knocked one out. She declares that it was negligence on the part of the gas company and the city to permit the meters to project as they did.

NEWSPAPERMEN ARE BEFORE GRAND JURY

New York, Feb. 20.—Because of their refusal to divulge a source of information, George Burdick, financial editor, and W. L. Cowley, news reporter of the New York Tribune, were presented before the federal grand jury for alleged contempt. They refused to tell where they got their information from, which they based a story concerning former representative Lucius N. Littauer who pleaded guilty of smuggling, and other customs cases.

The federal authorities desired to learn where the "leak" was supposedly in the customs house by which the newspapermen were enabled to obtain the story in advance of the formal proceedings in court.

The newspapermen refused to answer on constitutional grounds. Pardons from president Wilson were offered them, which it was held out to them would remove all possibility of consequences but the witnesses remained silent.

It was charged by the federal counsel that the newspaper men were attempting to shield a government officer who had betrayed his trust.
